We have had a spicy contest on the question of canals in both houses this evening. The Assembly killed the bill for the speedy completion of the entargement of the Oswego canal, by a decided vote, after a spicy debate, in which we were informed of the ligurance of the contractor—a novelty, indeed, and if true, he should be handed over to Barnum as a curiosity.

The Senate had under discussion the bill for the completion and enlargement of the canals of the State and the completion of the Chenango canal in particular, in which we had a lively debate—Senators Truman and Hammond in favor and Senators Sessions, Lapham and Prosser against. After some two hours fillibustering, the amendment appropriating seventy thousand to the dollars Chenango canal, was adopted, and the bill reported to the Senate.

ment appropriating seventy thousand to the dollars Chenango canal, was adopted, and the bill reported to the Senate.

The discussion during the evening took a wide range, and was, withal, interesting. The bill goes into the hands of the Canal Committee with instructions to strike out the provision for enlarged locks.

The bill for the protection of the property in trade and the earnings of married women, giving to them the same rights and convol of their carnings as single females, making all contracts entered into by a married woman as valid in all respects as it she was single, and in a like manner liable thereupen. Her property and stock in trade not hable for her husband's debts was under consideration in the House, and ordered to a third reading.

The bill to appoint inspectors and Canvassers occupied a large portion of the evening session. It was discussed upon the various amendments by Messrs. Calheott, A Smith, Milliken, Myers, Jaques, Miller and others, and was finally ordered to a third reading, by a vote of 63 years to 33 nays. The debate kept up its usual interest until the final agreement to recommend its passage.

Mayor Wood and party reached here here this evening from Syracuse, en route for New York, in good spirits, and well pleased with the results of the Couvention at Syracuse. He remains here until to-morrow to visit his friends. His rooms are crowded this evening.

The appointment of Harbor Masters will ave another overhauting to-morrow. A resolution will be offered appointing a committee of three, and empowering them to send for persons and papers. Should this fail in the executive session, three of the appointees will doubtless be rejected.

Historical Society.

Interesting discourse of Bon. E. G. Squier on the unexplored regions of central america. A paper of more than usual interest was real before the Historical Society, at its monthly meeting, last evening, by Hon E. G. Sourze, on 'The Unexplored Regions of Central America.' The audience was large and appreciative, and listened with marked attention. The lecturer commenced by saying, that notwithstanding the z all and energy with which geographical inquiry had been pushed forward during the last quarter of a century, solving the masteries of the polar regions and many of the angement mysteries of the polar regions and many of the enigmas of Africa, yet that there were considerable portions of rai wealth, traversed by navigable rivers, and complete by strarge peoples, which remained in as complete isolation and enveloped in as profound a mystery as at the time of the discovery. There were two notable instances in Central america: First, the Boison of the Guntuscs, fullprising the entire vailey of the Rio Frio, one of the princi-pal streams falling into the Lake of Nicaragua. This pai streams ining into the lake of Nicaragus. This valley his between the true Cordilleras of the continent and the volcanic Pacific coast range of mountains, and is estimated by Mr. Squier at one hundred and fitsy miles long by from eighty to ninety broad. It has never been penetrated by civilized man. Various attempts were made by the church and the civil and military authorities of the crown to communicate with its inhabitants, and bring them under the Spanish authority; but all were effectually repelled, as have been also the few feeble efforts to explore the region made since the independence. Of the Indians, called Guatusos, inhabitant, the most extraordinary notions are entertained by the people of the adjacent States. They are reputed to be above the ordinary stature, with comparatively light complexions and red hair; and tales are told of some of their women having been seen by hunters and others, as fair and beautiful as the fairest Europeans. Such stories, however, are entitled to no credit; but the fact remains of the existence here of a large unexplored district, inhabited by a considerable population, with character, habits, language, religion and modes of life, probably in no degree changed from what they were before the conquent, and that, too, so near one of the great American lines of transit across the continent that the sound of the beating paddles of our steamers on the river San Juan, and in Lake Nicaragua, must often be echoed back from the mountains that shut them in. But the bulk of Mr. Squier's discourse was taken up with an account, based upon recent gua, must often be echoed back from the mountains that shut them in. But the bulk of Mr. Squier's discourse was taken up with an account, based upon recent explorations, of a hitherto unexplored district further to the northward, much larger and more intresting than the Bolson of the Guatasce. This is the vast region lying between Chiapa, Tabasco, Yucatan and the republic of Guatamala, which appears in our maps either as a blank or is only conjecturally filled up with mountains, lakes and streams. All that has been known of it is, that it is traversed by nameless ranges of mountains, among which the great river Usumasinta gathers its waters from a thousand tributaries before pouring them in a mighty flood into the Gulf of Mexico, and that it is still occupied by a constiterable body of Indians, the Lacandones and others, who have successfully resisted the force of the Spanish arms, who still maintain their independence, and preserve and practise the rites and habits of their ancestors, as they existed before the era of Columbus and Cortez. It is in the depths of this region, on some far off tributary of the Usumasinta, that the popular tradition of Guatemala and Chiapa places inat great aboriginal city, with its white walls glistening in the sun, which the curé of Quiche affirmed to Mr. Stephens he had seen, with his own eyes, from the tops of the mountains of Quesaltenango. Cortez spent two years in traversing this region, in his famous march from Mexico into Honduras; but altoc his day the greater part of it has remained untracked and undescribed. Mr. Squier described this region, which altogether equals New Bagland in area, as naturally divided into three districts: the Great Upper vailey of Usumasinta, as yet whelly unexplored; the territorial basin of Peten, destitute of an outlet, and having in its centre the large lake of itza, and the province of Vera Par, the ancient land of war of the Spaniards. Peten was formerly occupied by the warlike litzacs, a branch of the peoples cient iand of war of the Spaniards. Peten was formerly occupied by the warlike Itzacs, a branch of the people of Yucatan, who relained their independence, built massive tempice after the fashions of their ancostors, and retained their primitive forms of government and religion up to 1665, a little more than a hundred and fifty years ago. They were then reduced, and most of their temples and public editions destroyed; but as their country was shut in by high and almost impassable mountains and was foresten, and was moreover destitutered the preclosus metals, it was allewed to relapse into something like its original consistion, with strange, and, in another respects, commandoniotations, trough thought of the Schoded from the world, its people new live in a state of almost Arcadian simplicity, of which Mr. Squier drew a graphic and pleasing picture, giving also an outline of their history, and an account of the ancient monuments found in their territory, which bear a great resemblance to those of Palenque and Yucatan. The geography and topography of Peten, however, are perhaps more interesting than its people. The district, as aircady said, is a terrestrial basia, elevatively with the same of the state of fifty miles long, which has a history been a puzzle to geographers. The natives call it by a name which signifies Prinz funct, from the circumstance that it receives but gives out no water. It is deep and studded with islands, on one of which the ancient lineas had be year novel species of alligator, or rather by a true crocodile—the only congener of the African variety, probably, which has yet been found on this continent. There are also a large number of other rauly season are overfrowed, per mitting of nearly uninterrupted cance navigation.

He spoke o' the effects of Macauley in the cause of our common huma sity, and though he did not give the decess ad the rank of a great poet, still he thought that taking him in all his great efforts he might be termed a magnificent mediocrity. At cauley was one of those men who would not have been the entogist of John Brown either in the Old or in the New World. (Applause.) He did not believe that men were born to be trodden under foot by pricets or kings (hear, hear); and because Macauley stood up thus nobly in behalf of human rights, his name is honored and his memory revored in this broad land of freedom, and his monument is now not only in Poets' Corner, in Westminster Abbay, but wherever a true heart beats for the love of liberty and the onward march of human freedom. A Planter Killed and Burned by Ris Slaves.—On the 30th ult, says the Richmond Dispatch, Dr. William Croxton, a highly intelligent citizen of Essex county, Va, had occasion to correct a servant woman for some offence, but did so in a mild and gentle manner. This fact enraged a negro man, who vowed to have revenge, but at the time gave his master no intimation of his intention. On the lat inst., whilst one of the servants was engaged in grinding a cutting knife, Dr. Croxton walked to where he was, and whilst looking on, without suspecting danger, another servant stepped behind him, gave him a violent blow upon the back of the head, which felled him to the ground, and then dispatched him. The two then dragged him behind the barn, and, kindling a Gre, placed his body on it and burned it. They next out the skirts of the saddle upon his riding horse, and then turned the horse loose, expecting to create the impression that he had been attacked on the road and murdered. When the Doctor was missing, his friends instituted a search for him, and in the pile of ashes near the barn discovered two or three of his lingers and a portion of one of his feet. The murder has caused great excitement in the neighborhood in which it was committed.
